Was able to protect rights and increase opportunities for working class people -- while white-collar is going very strong in Seattle, for example, blue-collar earnings and education are stagnant. One bill makes public university free for those who make $50K or less, funded by industries that depend on university education. Cascade Care will make health care affordable for individual insurance buyers who make just a bit too much to qualify for Medicaid. Pathway to Universal Healthcare, introduced by Emily, is funded in the budget established by this leg. session, workgroups in late 2020, plan to introduce in early 2021. A Housing Affordability Committee was formed with strong bipartisan support AND cooperation between tenant and landlord representatives. Pilot program to ensure tertiary students are also able to afford housing. Transportation -- need at least one more boat, funding secured for study for entire region to increase foot ferries through Puget Sound. Funding for 2 ferries secured, one restoration, one new vessel, with fares capped to ensure affordability. Orca protection secured by improving salmon habitat, reducing toxic pollution, and reducing noise.

7: 15 – 8:30: Program

11. Program: Bob Ferguson, Washington State Attorney General since 2013, speaks about his actions to address issues that affect the State resulting from policies from the Trump Administration

Tony Otto introduced the Attorney General who, even in private practice, defeated Tim Eyman initiatives by supporting his contention that they were unconstitutional. In public service, he was on King County Council. First ran for WA AG in 2012, re-elected in 2016. He has filed 35 federal lawsuits, won 22 of them, and lost none. He talked about the new blood invigorating the state legislature, epitomized by Emily Randall. Why are we winning so much in court against the Trump administration? Because the changes made by the current administration are based on bad law or on lies. For example, DACA promised everyone, in writing, that their information would never be used to deport them -- yet when the administration rescinded these protections, this promise disappeared from the government's website. Ferguson said that "a deal's a deal" is a fundamental principle of this country and took the administration successfully to court.

Q&A -- How big is your office? 640 lawyers and support staff. Ferguson described how before his election, questions from the public about civil rights were referred to outside firm. He has brought this work inside his department and hired civil rights lawyers. Half the lawsuits are environmental so there are many environmental lawyers and experts. What about detention centers, e.g., Tacoma? It's run by a private, for-profit corporation that has had problems at other sites. Much of the work at their sites is done by detainees paid at prison rates, but these sites aren't prisons. Ferguson sued to get minimum wage going forward and retroactive pay as well. Status report on Tim Eyman? PDC felt there was wrongdoing by Eyman, and AG's office is pursuing the charge that he has not fully disclosed his donors and has personally profited from these initiatives. Suit demands that he no longer be allowed to handle finances. Ferguson says he talks about the work being done by his department to as many non-partisan groups as possible (e.g., Rotary Clubs) in addition to Democratic groups and does not change words or tone, wishes that more elected officials would do this.
